(1831–1908) and Sourindramohan Tagore Sourindramohan (1840–1914), were leading men in the world of theatre and music besides remaining powerful landholders. Jotindramohan was given the titles of raja bahadur, maharaja, and maharaja bahadur. Sourindramohan earned a doctorate in music from the University of Pennsylvania in 1875 and was the author of An Universal History of Music (1896).

At Jorasanko House Nilmoni left three sons, Ramlochan Tagore (d. 1807), Rammani Tagore (1759–1831), and Ramballav Tagore. Rammani's son Dwarkanath Tagore (1794–1846) was adopted by Ramlochan, who was childless. Dwarkanath's meteoric career took him from Bengal to Europe. He turned himself into an independent merchant at a time when wealthy Indians in the mercantile professions worked only as banians to European firms. In 1834 Dwarkanath Tagore chose to retire from his high post as diwan of the board of customs, salt, and opium and launched the firm of Carr, Tagore & Co. He was congratulated by the governor-general, Lord William Bentinck, for being the first Indian to start an Indo-British commercial enterprise. The firm supplied indigo and silk, and did business in coalmining, shipping, insurance, and banking. Dwarkanath Tagore added spectacularly to the family estates and had many successes on his tour of Europe in 1842, when he dined with Queen Victoria at Buckingham Palace, and had audiences with the pope in Rome and with King Louis-Philippe in Paris. In his own country he was Rammohan Roy's dedicated partner in founding the monotheistic Brahmo Samaj, in abolishing the rite of suttee or widow burning, in sponsoring the Landholders' Society for monitoring the government's land legislation, and in championing freedom of the press. After his death The Times of London asserted that 'his name will be proudly associated with all the noble institutions flourishing in Calcutta' (The Times, 3 August 1846). He was popularly known as 'Prince Dwarkanath', both for his great generosity and for his high style of living. He entertained his European guests lavishly, and acquired a suburban house called Belgachia Villa for the purpose, in deference to his wife, who was religiously and socially orthodox. He also had a batikh-khana, or living room, built for himself in the courtyard of Jorasanko House. He was sensitive towards his family's way of life. In his own personal faith he remained a Vaishnava Hindu throughout, but his way of worship was his own. He was remarkable in combining his love of his country and heritage with his radical thinking. His younger brother Ramanath (1800–1877) was his close ally in

Dictionary of African Biography

Edited by Henry Louis Gates, Emmanuel Akyempong, and Steven J. Niven

From the pharaohs to Freetown, Dictionary of African Biography provides a comprehensive overview of the lives of the men and women who shaped Africa's history. Unprecedented in scale, DAB covers the whole continent from Tunisia to South Africa, from Sierra Leone to Somalia. It also encompasses the full scope of history from Queen Hatshepsut of Egypt (1479–1458 BCE) and Hammurabi, the military commander and strategist of Carthage (243–183 BCE), to Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana (1909–1972), Miriam Makeba, and Nelson Mandela of South Africa (b. 1918). Subjects are drawn from all walks of life, including philosophers, politicians, activists, entertainers, scholars, poets, scientists, religious figures, kings, and everyday people.
