Imperial and Commonwealth history

Senate House Library houses the Institute of Commonwealth Studies \(ICWS\) collection, an extensive research-level collection that covers the Commonwealth and its member nations across Africa, Asia, the Caribbean, Oceania and Europe, their histories and the history of the British Empire (for more information see our guide on Commonwealth studies).

In addition to its library collections, the ICWS has over 230 archival collections. The archives contain materials relating to the history of the British Empire and the Commonwealth from the 18th to the 20th century. Many Commonwealth countries and former British colonies are represented, but holdings on South Africa and the Caribbean are especially strong. The archives of Commonwealth organisations (such as the Commonwealth Trade Union Council and the Commonwealth Press Union) and the papers of Commonwealth Studies researchers are further strengths among the holdings. ICWS archives can be searched through Senate House Library's archive catalogue by using the Advanced Search function and filtering by the Repository "Institute of Commonwealth Studies".

Political archives of pamphlets collected by ICWS from current and former members of the Commonwealth extend to material from over 60 countries. They largely date from the 1960s and 1970s and give insight into processes of decolonisation and transitions to independence. The pamphlets can be explored through Senate House Library's archive catalogue by using the Advanced Search function and filtering by the Reference code "PP" (standing for Political Pamphlets).
